Flash Fiction with Winona Wendth

The history of flash fiction and its seedlings—short-shorts, drabble, micro-fiction, and 55-words stories, not to mention those six-word memoir projects—has its roots in cave-drawings, but its branches in the internet. How much can we say in how few words? This craft workshop introduces flash fiction and its several sub-categories as both an end in itself and as a way to better understand our own longer works. How can we use these compact forms of precision writing in which every word matters? We'll read some of the best 1000-word-or-fewer flashes and write some of our own.

Winona Winkler Wendth holds an MFA in literature and writing with an emphasis on creative non-fiction from the Bennington Writing Seminars. She currently teaches writing, literature, and other humanities courses at Quinsigamond Community College. Her work appears frequently in print and online literary journals and was listed in Best American Essays/2010. She writes both fiction and creative non-fiction, including "flash." She is finishing a collection of memoiristic essays and working on a short novel.

And Coming Soon....The Poetry Room, Monday, January 23, 2017, 6:30 – 8:30 PM, The Parlor, First Church, 725 Main Street, Lancaster, MA

Looking for a place to connect with fellow poets and share conversation? Seven Bridge Writers' Collaborative offers the Poetry Room where local poets have the chance to share work, discuss craft, and support each other in the creative process.

For questions regarding any programs, please contact us at 7bridgewriterscollaborative@gmail.com.

Bridging Writers Author Series, Monday, February 6, 2017, John Bell reading from The Road to Concord, 6:30 – 8:00 PM, Thayer Memorial Library

J. L. Bell is a writer from Newton specializing in the start of the American Revolution. The Road to Concord is a new look at the start of the Revolutionary War, tracing the genesis of the fateful British march in April 1775 to little-known events of the preceding September. In that month a militia uprising in the Massachusetts countryside set off an "arms race" for artillery. Men on each side of the conflict grabbed any cannon they could find in shore batteries, ships, and merchants' stores. The Road to Concord is the first book to tell the full story of those cannons.

MOONLIGHT WALK & WINTER FUN

SATURDAY

FEBRUARY 11, 2017, 7:00 PM

Please join volunteer Recreation Committee members Johnna Doyle and Win Clark for a walk and winter fun illuminated by the lovely February full moon. Win will educate us about the Dexter Drumlin area. A one-mile easy walking footpath passes over the top of the drumlin and loops back to the entrance.

Please wear boots and dress in layers. Weather conditions permitting, bring along snowshoes and sleds for some winter fun!

Hot chocolate will be provided.

What makes Dexter Drumlin a special place?

"As the last glacier moved across and scoured the New England landscape, it formed glacial drumlins (hills running parallel to the direction of the glacial flow) like Dexter Drumlin." The Dexter Drumlin was formed over 10,000 years ago by a glacier. The Dexter Drumlin is part of a 35 acre reservation that is saturated with lush meadows, hay fields, and wet lands. This typical New England terrain shares it's boundary with the historic Nashua River. Dexter Drumlin offers views of historic Lancaster and its surrounding farmland.
